It appears that on the afternoon of the 13th June, the Major wenterinte the North American Hotel in Williamsburg, when he met the prisoner, treated him several times, same songs together, and finally wound up by a playful trial of strength in a wrestling match, after which the accused quickly vamosed and the pocket book of the Major was found in a few minutes after to have done the same. The Major, however, was unable to identify the prisoner, and was in its same ignorance with regard to the number of drinks he had taken. Though the accused did not bear the best of characters, the Jury returned a verdict of not guilty, as there was some doubt in the case.

A "HERGINE" IMPOSTOR.—The Rochester Democrat of the 15th, contains the following: "Some time in the month of June, a girl, 16 or 17 years of age, accompanied by a boy of 12 or 13, made application to the Superintendent of the Poor for assistance. Her story was, that her parents a few years age moved to fline is from the victuity of Hartfort, Ct.; and that both sickened and died by the disease of the climate, leaving her destitute with four brothers and sisters, whom she was trrusporting with an old wagon and span of horses—all that was left of her fathers preparty—to the East to be provided for by their friends. The Superintended insisted, much against her wishes, upon accompanying her to the wagon, in order to accertain the reath of her tale; and wandering about for some time, she at last conducted him to the vicinity of Brownsquare, where the wagon stood, guarded by two stout, lary looking fellows, who immediately look to their heels.

The girl was obliged to confess the imposture, and begged not to be exposed. While the Superintendent was taking the necessary measures for arresting her, she and the boy escaped in the wagon. He heard nothing more of them till an article appeared in the Hartford papers giving an account of a "Yankee Heroine who had made a journey from Illinois to Connecticut with her orphan brothers and sisters.
